The cause of the growth of events may be a sense of discharge

June 8 / 2020

While the protests against racism and police violence that started after George Floyd, who was killed while being detained by the police in the USA, Political Scientist Asst. Prof. Dr. Alihan Limoncuoğlu said: "It takes time for the events to pass because the reason for the growth of the events there may be the pandemic and the a sense of discharge after the lockdown.

A survey was conducted by the Wall Street Journal and NBC News about the death of George Floyd, a new type of coronavirus (Covid-19) outbreak in the USA. The questionnaire was assessed by political scientist Asst. Prof. Dr. Alihan Limoncuoğlu. Stating that anti-EU parties are getting stronger as events grow in Europe, Political Scientist Asst. Prof. Dr. Alihan Limoncuoğlu from Istanbul

Gelisim University said, "The survey shows that despite tremendous media propaganda, Donald Trump preserves his support. Support for Trump's actions fell only 1 percent compared to April. European nations lost their confidence in the EU during the pandemic. While Salvini was holding a large rally in Italy, anti-order yellow vests returned to the streets in France. While the demonstrations on the streets of America continue to take up a lot of media coverage and jump to Western Europe, polls in many places reveal that those who do not go out on the streets are indeed a considerable number, though not the "silent majority" as Trump tweeted."

Advice for couples to be happy during a pandemic*June 8 2020

Expert Psychologist Selin Kalabaş, who advises couples who are closed to homes during the coronavirus pandemic, for a happy relationship, said: "Couples can spend time in different rooms within the house during this process. Couples can spend time in their own rooms and focus on their work as if they are going to work. Since longing come forward, it also contributes positively to their relationships."

"SPOUSES EVALUATE IT WRONG"

Expressing that couples should create personal spaces inside the house, Expert Psychologist Selin Kalabaş said: "Having to spend time together for a long time during the COVID-19 outbreak couples who do not develop their listening skills, constantly interrupt the words of their spouses, criticize, judge and use the 'language of you' have a bad pandemic period. When couples do not know how to be together or do not spend time on their own work and their favorite activities in the same house, this affects them negatively. In fact, when one spends time alone, the other spouse misinterprets this situation and turns it into a problem. So they argue with each other as a result of dysfunctional evaluations such as "he is not interested in me at all".

Stating that according to the World Inequality Database, the income group in the bottom 50 percent in terms of income inequality has a share between 9 and 10 percent, Asst. Prof. Dr. Onur Özdemir: "Pandemic can cause a global increase in income inequality."

The coronavirus pandemic hit the world economies deeply. We have become aggressive with coronavirus*June 12 2020

Explaining that people are deprived of their liberty during the Covid-19 quarantine and this situation causes a sense of frustration, Clinical Psychologist Ünal Erdem Elli said: "Frustration response is related to aggression. People can react more aggressively to events than usual."

Stating that aggressive reactions will lead to disruption in limited social relations, Elli said: "The most important factor in dealing with the psychological factors created by the pandemic process is to remember that the emotions such as anxiety, fear, uncertainty, anger that the person feels are useful unless they eliminate the functionality of the person. When these feelings are shared with the people around them, it will be easier to cope with their negative effects, as social support will increase."
