Full closure recommendation from psychiatrists:
Video chat with your loved ones

MAY 4

2021

Stating that the pandemic brings many problems such as depression, feeling of burnout and especially trauma, Psychiatrist Dr. Alişan Burak Yaşar says, "There are moments when we feel helpless. We cannot use coping mechanisms such as human relations and solidarity. People heal people. Talk to our loved ones in the morning and evening by video chatting for 10-15 minutes if possible."

The lockdown process continues in the coronavirus. Pointing out that a mental pandemic is also being experienced in this period, Psychiatrist from Istanbul Gelisim University Alişan Burak Yaşar says, "We are in a very difficult period in terms of dating, social relations and meetings due to the pandemic.

Previously, when a person felt bad, they would go visit their neighbor and meet with their friends. At least, they used to go for a walk. People had already limited their social relationships in fear of being infected before the lockdown started. We are deprived of social opportunities, we cannot label it as good or bad because we had to do so. But we must realize that this situation will cause psychological wounds."

“Balance resting and being active during the lockdown”

Stating that the full closure may result in various health problems in many people as a result of being inactive or wrong resting, Physiotherapy Specialist Gülşah Konakoğlu from Istanbul Gelisim University (IGU) School of Health Sciences Physiotherapy and Rehabilitation warns, “First of all, we need to balance resting and being active since the muscles in our body have a certain working capacity and when we do not use them, their strength decreases. This situation may lead to a decrease in cardiovascular endurance and spine problems that negatively affect waist and neck health.”

Experts warn that sedentary life invites various health problems and even lying down and resting is dangerous. Lect. Physiotherapist Gülşah Konakoğlu states that many people move less especially during the pandemic process, and she gives information about the diseases that can be caused by sedentary life and the correct forms of rest.

When to pull out wisdom teeth?

Drawing attention to the problems caused by wisdom teeth, the third molar tooth that usually develops before the age of 25, Mouth, Dental and Maxillofacial Surgery Specialist Asst. Prof. Dr Özge Özdal Zincir says, “These teeth should be pulled out in case of caries, gingivitis, cystic structure due to tissue damage or disrupting the tooth alignment.”

Stating that wisdom teeth are completely embedded, partially impacted or completely erupted third molars, Zincir says, “These fully or semi-embedded wisdom teeth cause decay, gingivitis and cyst formation in contact with neighboring teeth. As a result of the pressure they make, they can disrupt the tooth alignment. Embedded wisdom teeth are the ones that are not fully erupted and are located at the back of the jaw. There are a total of four wisdom teeth, two in the upper and two in lower jaws. Although this number is less than four in some people or one may never have wisdom teeth.”

“University Programs related to aviation are in demand”

The increase in private aviation companies, the rapid growth and development process in air transportation bring the need for qualified personnel. It is noted that departments related to aviation are quite popular in universities and students who graduate from related departments have the opportunity to find well-paid jobs in a short time.

It is stated that within the framework of the cooperation between the Council of Higher Education and the General Directorate of Civil Aviation, a limited number of higher education institutions in Turkey have the “Recognized School” certificate and the students who graduate from universities with this certification have many privileges.
