News from Our Alumni

Hello! This is Deniz Dinç...

I am a '19 graduate of Istanbul Gelisim University Applied Sciences Faculty Gastronomy and Culinary Arts Department. I pursue my MA education in Istanbul Gelisim University Higher Education Institute, Gastronomy Programme.

Throughout my education in university, I thought that Gastronomy Department and its education thanks to its multidisciplinary side would support me in the sector. For this reason, my career has evolved with the help of my departmental professors, the education I had, my sectoral experiences in my successful career plan. One of the important points that makes me carry onward is applying the experience and knowledge that I gained in my education. I believe that the ongoing practical and theoretical education that I had in the Department and the internship period were contributed to me a lot which also lead me to become the chef in the two branches of "The North Shield" even if I haven't completed my BA degree. My endeavor and hard work also helped me a lot. After my BA degree, I think that pursuing further academic education would be beneficial for me, as well as newsworthy. This is why I start my MA degree in Istanbul Gelisim University Gastronomy Programme.

The academic staff's experience of the program, theoretical and practical courses of the program bring in a new perspective to me. Furthermore, I stepped into a new career by creating a brand with my past experiences, which is named "The Roof Kingdom" where I become the "Consultant" and "Chef." I also set an example for new interns by passing my experience and knowledge where I become a chef in the restaurant. There are both interns from our school and other schools.

With realizing the importance of education and starting off my work experience for this multidisciplinary area which contains an ongoing education process, I would like to highlight the importance of correct guidance and self-sacrifice. I would also like to wish you success both in education and work life, kind regards.

Interview

Mr. Hamit Güler, Deputy General Manager at Hill+Knowlton Strategies:
“Companies should not consider “sustainability” only as a project-based matter, but they should consider extensively from the companies’ production processes, HR applications to shareholder communication and marketing processes...”

Mr. Hamit Güler, first of all, we would like to thank you for accepting our interview invitation. As it is known, communication is a subject and concept that covers our daily life and agenda the most. What kind of innovations can we expect in the medium term with the “digital transformation of communication”?

In the new world, and especially in the last two years, in which we experience the fastest transformation, societies and individuals; As their needs, interests and approaches to developments changed, we started to encounter new trends in digital transformation.

The perspectives, behaviors and interpretations of new generations, such as today's Alpha generation, are changing all our traditional teachings of the past. I see these generations, which have easier access to information and resources and reduce socialization, as a generation that has the potential to use their talents at the highest level.

Hill+Knowlton Strategies

Interview

When we look at it as a communication professional, the shortening of focus and attention spans is a factor that makes us communicators very difficult to adapt to this rapid transformation. In the future communication trends, in the short and medium term; social listening, behavioral analysis, neuromarketing, short content we call phygital (short for physical and digital communication) will be on the agenda. Brands; Approaches to inclusion, diversity, planetary protection, climate change and sustainability, as well as tangible practices that can be measured beyond, will become even more important.

You are absolutely right... Then what would you prefer to say about Public Relations discipline?

The Public Relations industry is rediscovering the power of its employees to lead and bring about change today...

By the 2000s, communicators are "traditional?", "digital?", "transformational?" While they spent time questioning new platforms, sometimes putting sets and sometimes integrating, they ignored their real potential. Those who predicted that the sector would shrink even more by experiencing serious losses during these periods were not to be underestimated. However, this transformation brought along different needs beyond the obvious. All these developments and sectoral dynamics have once again revealed how important the power of content is. We have entered an era where content is only valuable when it makes sense.

Interview

But these abilities can take the industry to a certain extent. The professionals of our profession will determine its importance in the future as well. I believe that Public Relations professionals who can use data analytics systems, evaluate and make sense of data and deliver them to target audiences through the right channels will be very successful in this sense and will carry the profession into the future.

Mr. Güler, what do you think about “sustainability” and its applicability? How do they act to succeed in this?

I would like to answer this by mentioning the target groups’ expectations in companies. Today’s youngsters expect companies to be transparent, sincere, and accessible. Beyond expecting from the companies, they invite them to evolve according to the needs of today by contacting them.

Accordingly, they set a wall against the companies who do not care for nature, animals, gender mainstreaming, and the sustainability of the planet. This is why the companies in Turkey should be keen on sincere and responsible viruses and care for the ongoing projects with those aspects.

The topic of sustainability has been prominent in Turkey for almost years. There are many companies in Turkey which have managed to do this. Then, I became a part of one of these brands in Turkey and I am still working in an ongoing process of sustainability for the companies. The companies should handle the phenomenon of sustainability in terms of production, İK processes, communication with the shareholders, and the marketing acts. I believe that we should look at this topic as not only a “trend” but a target for social and personal approach to success in their aims and targets.

Mr. Güler, young communicators also follow our bulletin, what would you suggest for the candidates?

I would like to suggest to them to observe constantly, watch and compare the observations with their emotions in their current lives. As I have been into the communication sector for years, as a professional of communication, I witness young candidates are now more sensible and responsive to current social issues.

Interview

The communication sector is no longer only the focus of the area. I reckon that this sector has become a system engineering for those who care about observation, multidisciplinary, and the easiness of the application in many areas.

For this reason, I suggest them to select at least 2 or 3 areas. This could be modern art, a different part of technology, gaming or a topic related to the folk. They will see that these will support them for their communication skills along with the different dynamic for the both practical and strategical.

We would like to thank you Mr. Güler...

Me too... Thank you Istanbul Gelisim University Applied Sciences Faculty and e-bulletin team for hosting me in this issue...
