“Deaths with cyanide poisoning are not mass suicide”

NOVEMBER 18, 2019

Sociologist Asst. Prof. Dr. Kemal Er at Istanbul Gelisim University evaluated the deaths with cyanide poisoning and said that it is not right to consider these cases as mass suicide. He made statements about the deaths with cyanide poisoning in Fatih, Bakırköy and Antalya.

IGU Asst. Prof. Dr. Sociologist Kemal Er said: “It is not right to consider these cases as mass suicide. We need to have sufficient information, documents and data in order to evaluate them as mass suicide. However, we have not got any in these cases. In fact, there is a child involved in the last incident in Bakırköy, who is unlikely to have made such a decision. Therefore, without information, documents we cannot say such a thing. A collective decision must be made for mass suicide. However, this is not the case here. In other words, there are mass suicides committed by sects. A certain closed culture may have decided collectively within that culture, but this is not the case here. It is possible to say something about mass suicide, let’s take individual suicide as an example. In individual suicide, just as a person consciously decides to commit suicide, people who have commit suicide in mass suicide must have made a joint decision together. We cannot say such a thing because we do not have enough information and documents about such a situation here.”
