In the workshop, there are 9 types of temperament, general characteristics, subtypes, relationship dynamics between temperaments, healthy / unhealthy temperament development and temperaments’ parent attitudes-oriented general temperaments.

Recognizing and interpreting personalities is of great importance in the field of Human Resources. Human Resources management needs to manage temperament differences and gather expectations and desired competencies from candidates in one point. While making these definitions, it contributes to being objective in the evaluation. As a result of the training, it is expected that it will be an assessment tool for Human Resources to recognize temperaments and contribute to the students’ professional performance and success with this training.
